There are 37 institutions of higher education in Virginia with approved programs for the preparation of professional personnel. In addition to meeting standards adopted by the Board of Education, Virginia's programs require an arts and sciences degree and extensive clinical experience in the course of study for prospective teachers.

The review and approval of programs for the preparation of professional school personnel is viewed as the cooperative responsibility of institutions of higher education, school divisions, and the Department of Education. The purposes of program approval are to assist prospective teachers in developing the background necessary for quality instruction in the public schools, to encourage institutions to meet rigorous academic standards of excellence in professional education, and to facilitate reciprocity in the teacher licensure process with other states.

The Board of Education raised standards for all students in Virginia's public schools with the adoption of K-12 Standards of Learning (SOL). Following the adoption of the SOL and a testing program to assess students' achievement of the standards, the Board of Education also revised licensure regulations for school personnel to ensure that teachers have the background needed to facilitate student achievement of the standards. Rather than specifying courses for approved programs, the licensure regulations set forth competencies that are aligned with the SOL.

Thus, the approved program process ensures that academic programs are aligned with the licensure competencies and the K-12 student standards and that the programs meet high professional standards that require continuous evaluation and improvement. The programs identified in this publication serve as the foundation for the development of competent instructional personnel and are recognized for their excellence in the Commonwealth of Virginia and the nation.

If additional information is needed about the program approval process or specific programs offered in Virginia, please contact the institutional official or the Division of Teacher Education and Licensure, Virginia Department of Education, Post Office Box 2120, Richmond, Virginia 23218-2120.
